If Your Partner...

Tries to control you, calls you names, humiliates you, makes you feel worthless, tells you you're a bad parent, threatens you, isolates you from your friends and family, forces you to have sex, pushes you, twists your arm, grabs you or frightens you, you may be in an abusive relationship.

By learning about the different types of abuse and what you can do to stop or prevent it, you can make a huge difference in your own life or someone else's life.

WHERE TO FIND HELP: The National Domestic Violence Hotline provides 24/7 crisis intervention and referrals to local sources of help in all 50 states. Call 1-800-799-SAFE (7233) or 1-800-787-3224 (TTY).

Watch over all our dear ones who serve this day in the military.
Hold them safely in the palm of your hand.
Walk with them in your strength.
Bring comfort and hope when they are weary.
Remind them of our love.
Merciful Lord,
Bring a lasting peace into our midst.
Heal our hearts and help all nations find ways to live in harmony
So that blood is shed no more.
We ask this in the name of Christ Jesus,
Prince of Peace. Amen*

Our generation is rich in everything, except innocence and happiness.

Ron Rolheiser, OMI

THE DEATH OF INNOCENCE

We pride ourselves on our experience, our sophistication, and our lack of naivete. And we are ashamed to admit that we aren't experienced, that we haven't been everywhere, and that we don't know everything.

Innocence is identified with naivete and is generally looked upon either with condescension or with positive disdain. Lack of sexual experience particularly is stigmatized. We see innocence as ignorance.

Moreover, our culture extends this equation to faith in God. Most of the culture, consciously or unconsciously, believes that contemporary experience and present development and insight, have unmasked faith as a superstition, an ignorance, a lack of nerve, a lack of sophistication, a narrowness, a fear, and even a bias.

The common perception, especially among intellectuals, is that contemporary experience has brought about a collective loss of faith because, at the end of the day, faith is an ignorance that is cast out by a fuller experience. To believe in God is to be naive, however sincere.

The French philosopher and historian Paul Ricoeur, whom nobody could ever accuse of being naive, tells us that as adults, the real goal of our lives is to come to something which he calls "second naivete". Real maturity is ultimately about revirginizing and coming to a second innocence.

This however is not to be confused with first naivete and natural innocence. We are born naive and innocent and the task of growing up is precisely to move beyond this childishness to adulthood. This is done, as our culture rightly intuitively, by growing in experience and sophistication.

For a while, this is good. First naivete in an adult is not innocence but ignorance.

Unfortunately, our culture misunderstands that growth beyond the natural ignorance of a child. Becoming sophisticated is itself meant to be a temporary step. Our real task is ultimately to become post-sophisticated – childlike and virginal again.

Jesus tells us that children and virgins enter the kingdom of heaven quite naturally. A world that prides itself on its adulthood, sophistication, and experience might want to ponder that.
